Do you provide housing for seasonal farm workers?

If your agricultural business employs seasonal workers for whom you plan to provide housing, you should know the following:

- Agricultural labor housing must be registered with OR-OSHA before it is occupied and must be re-registered each year.
- Operators of agricultural labor housing may be fined up to $7,000 by OR-OSHA if they fail to register the housing before it is occupied.
- Agricultural labor housing that has not been registered before, or whose registration has lapsed must have a pre-occupancy consultation by OR-OSHA before it may be registered and occupied. Call OR-OSHA 45 days prior to occupancy to arrange for a consultation.
- There is no cost for registering housing and no cost for pre-occupancy consultation. During the consultation, OR-OSHA may require changes. The owner of the housing is responsible for making the changes and forwarding the report to OR-OSHA with the application for registration.
- Certificates of registration must be displayed where housing occupants will see them and OR-OSHA may review them.

Please refer to OAR 437-004-1120 for Oregon rules covering agricultural housing.

If you want a copy of the OR-OSHA Agricultural Labor Housing Inspection Checklist, call the OR-OSHA office near you, or check the OR-OSHA Web site, www.orosha.org.

Agricultural labor housing registration materials will be mailed to those who request them by phone, and they may be picked up at any OR-OSHA field office between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m. weekdays.
